The Texas Buckeye Trail is a natural surface hiking trail that winds into an urban hardwood bottomland forest and passes through a 3 acre grove of Texas Buckeye trees and the confluence of White Rock Creek with the Trinity River. The trail network totals about 3 linear miles of cleared trail. Master Naturalist guides will lead our walk.

A short drive away is the Trinity River Audubon Center (trinityriveraudubon.org). The Center opened in the fall of 2008. It is designed by 2006 AIA Gold Medalist architect Antoine Predock and is an LEED-certified building constructed by the City of Dallas Park and Recreation Department. Its green features include a vegetated roof, rainwater collection system, energy efficient systems and recycled materials. Visitors have the opportunity to explore hands-on exhibits, four miles of nature trails, the Children's Discovery Garden and a great nature store with unique gifts and nature related items.

While at the Audubon Center we will have a late afternoon box lunch from Panera and a chance to refresh ourselves after hiking the scenic Buckeye Trail. Snacks and water will be available on the bus and for you to take on your walk.
